

Role: Junior Technical Designer

Location: Remote Home Working (candidate must be based in the UK)

About Rivet Games

Rivet Games is aiming to create the best add-on content for a range of video games. Our initial focus is to create add-ons for Dovetail Games' Train Sim World products for PC and Console.

Role overview

Rivet is seeking to recruit an enthusiastic and talented Junior Technical Designer to work as part of a small and passionate team developing add-ons for train simulation. The successful candidate must have the ability to use existing systems and features to deliver high quality content as well as demonstrate the key soft skills required to work within a team.

Responsibilities

- Research and understand real world systems and implement them into the game.
- Provide technical support for console and PC
- Work closely with Art & Programming departments to create and use systems that are robust and scalable to allow for fast iteration
- Act as the technical point of contact for key systems & gameplay features

What we are looking for

- Passion and aptitude for simulation system development
- UE4 scripting / C++ experience is beneficial
- Proficiency in maths/3D algebra
- Proficient with Unreal 4
- Ideally familiar with console development (PS4/Xbox)
- Good communication and team working capabilities
- Interest in trains and real-world simulation

Rivet Games benefits

- Fully remote other than compulsory company get-togethers every 6 weeks in central Scotland
- 26 days discretionary leave, plus 8 company assigned days
- 37.5 hour week with main core hours from 10:00am - 4:00pm
- Monthly subsidised social activities
- Employee referral bonus
- Maternity, paternity, shared parental, adoption and dependent leave available
- Game jams on company time
- Work as a key part of a small team on projects with a typical length of 3-6 months
- Credited for your contributions
